3.) Check for Stains

Stains should be treated before giving your clothes to the laundry. This will help ensure that the stains don't set and become permanent. There are many different types of stains, so it's important to do a little research to determine the best way to treat each one.

4.) Turn Clothes Inside Out

Turning your clothes inside out before giving them to the laundry can help reduce the amount of wear and tear that they experience. This is especially important for clothes that are prone to fading or have delicate embellishments.

5.) Use a Laundry Bag

If you have delicate or expensive clothes, consider using a laundry bag. This will help protect the clothes from getting damaged in the washing machine and provide an extra layer of protection during the drying process.

By following these six simple tips, you can help ensure that your clothes come back from the laundry looking their best. So, the next time you're getting ready to give your clothes to the laundry, take a moment to keep these things in mind, and you'll be well on your way to getting the best possible results!"

BLOGS6 things to keep in mind before giving to laundry

"Are you tired of picking up your clothes from the laundry only to find that they've shrunk, discolored, or been damaged in some other way? If so, you're not alone. Many people have had similar experiences, and it's often due to a lack of knowledge about what to do before giving their clothes to the laundry. In this blog, we'll share six things you should keep in mind before giving your clothes to the laundry to help ensure that they come back in the best possible condition.

1.) Read the Care Labels Your care labels on your clothes are there for a reason. They provide important information about how to properly care for your clothes and help ensure that they don't get damaged in the laundry. Before giving your clothes to the laundry, take a few minutes to read the care labels and follow the instructions carefully.

2.) Sort Your Clothes Sorting your clothes by color and type of fabric is one of the most important things you can do before giving them to the laundry. This will help prevent dye transfer and protect delicate fabrics from getting damaged.

3.) Check for Stains Stains should be treated before giving your clothes to the laundry. This will help ensure that the stains don't set and become permanent. There are many different types of stains, so it's important to do a little research to determine the best way to treat each one.
